

Cynthia Dixon is a real estate broker and part-owner of Empowerment Realty Group. She is also co-founder and president of JC Development where she oversees the acquisition and development of commercial and residential properties. With a strong belief in giving back, she takes time to educate individuals and groups interested in the real estate industry.

Her passion for real estate, education and serving others has led to her involvement in several boards and committees including the Apartment Association of Southeastern Wisconsin, the Wisconsin Real Estate Public Policy Committee and the Wisconsin Real Estate Diversity in Housing Committee.

Her background includes many years of teaching on the elementary and middle school level. She maintained a passion for implementing a “best practices” approach for motivating and educating students. She went on to serve in many leadership capacities including teacher-trainer, principal, and her own development of her own tutoring program, Tools of Empowerment Educational Services. This included a curriculum which was cutting-edge, blending computer technology and direct-instruction. Under this program, she served over 10,000 students across several school districts and a myriad of states. She received many awards for her efforts in both educating children and training teachers, including the prestigious Herb Kohl Teacher of the Year Award.

Cynthia presently holds a B.S. degree in Economics, a M.S. degree in Urban Education. In addition, she holds a Certification in Educational Leadership. She is presently authoring a book which she hopes to publish in 2020.
